

Edel Advantage Red Court

The ultimate alternative to clay

Combining the playing characteristics and appearance of clay with the benefits of an all-weather playing surface, Edel Advantage RedCourt has only to be installed on a stable, free draining base. There is no requirement for watering of the surface, so the high cost of a sprinkler installation is avoided and there will be no water bills. As with traditional clay courts, play takes place on an unbound surface which allows players to develop and use slide in a controlled motion allowing coverage of the whole court area with reduced effort and less stress on joints and ligaments.

The average 15 mm depth of red ceramic coated sand infill is stabilized by a 13 mm pile height polyethylene stability mat with 15 mm white play lines. With near year round availability Edel Advantage RedCourt allow play and training to be conducted on an ideal tennis playing surface in comfort and with minimal downtime.
